Welcome to the German micronations. If you got any questions feel free to ask. I got the impression that your English is far superior to your German so it might be best to converse in the former language. Is your micronation a virtual nation or styled like the English micronations as a country with a real claim but virtual ressources only?

We are active on a virtual world called Micras, you can view the map here. The orange land belongs to us.

And yes, my English is far superior to my German, I want to change that though, but should probably start by learning the German grammar again... 🤔
