

Aus dem Benelux: Batavia

To become a citizen you need another citizen to sponsor you in the Nationaal Beraad our parliament and your application and it will be treated like legislation so there will be a vote. You can gain the nationality a bit easier, the king normally grants that. There is a difference because in-sim it's odd to just take away the nationality of someone who has done much for the nation just because he is inactive now, on the other hand, it can be difficult for the in-game mechanisms if we have too many inactive citizens.

Our world? It's complicated... some of the English micronations are really fantasy oriented and as such we have even inherited a flying island... but we are basically (in-sim) the Benelux countries with 20 million people on an area the size of Russia spread over two continents.
